

Newmarket Square business owners, residents: Violence is out of control, we need help from city and governor

COURTESY ADAM GAFFIN
WWW.UNIVERSALHUB.COM

It was bad enough when the Long Island Bridge shut and even more individuals suffering from drug addiction began congregating in the area of Mass and Cass, Sue Sullivan said. But now, the area has become a haven for drug sellers and people quick to settle a beef with a knife or gun, the head of the Newmarket Business Association says.

Sullivan, local business owners and nearby residents from Roxbury and the South End gathered for a press conference today on Southampton Street, across from the city shelter and Atkinson Street, which have become a vortex for violence, they said. So far this year, Sullivan said, there have been two murders—one outside the shelter, one at Mass and Cass—along with ten stabbings and one shooting.

Changes at the Atkinson Street Comfort Station

For the past three weeks, the Atkinson Street "Comfort Station," one of the only daytime alternatives to local streets or parks for many of the people experiencing homelessness around Mass and Cass, has been closed, due to escalating violence. The City is currently evaluating how and if it can be successfully reopened and operated—a matter with implications for all in our community and Boston's homelessness and substance use disorder policies generally.

Created a year ago at the start of the pandemic to offer outdoor socially-distanced access to COVID-19 supplies, restrooms, health care and social services, the Atkinson

Bay Windows and South End News are up for sale!

BY JEFF COAKLEY
AND SUE O'CONNELL
CO-PUBLISHERS

What a time to be alive.

It doesn't matter if you read this phrase as a meme or think we're quoting Drake, this really is an amazing time to be alive.

As we emerge from the COVID-19 pandemic, one thing will become clear, if it hasn't already: we're living in a new world. This means new ways of doing business and accessing health care and education. Innovations in art, cultural, and culinary spaces. Wholesale reimaginings of community life and work space.

Nothing will ever return to "normal." Nor would we want it to. Over the past year, movements for social justice based on race have accelerated. Our schools, businesses, nonprofit institutions, government agencies, elected officials, and community-based organizations are incorporating demands for change. In many cases, they are leading it.

In these times of change, we invite one more. After publishing Bay Windows and South End News for 18 years, we are putting both publications up for sale.

The business of local news has changed in the two decades we've owned both papers. But the news and its importance to the community has not. That is why we are inviting community leaders, business owners, nonprofits, educational institutions and others to consider purchasing Bay Windows and South End News, either separately or together. We are committed to thinking creatively and working with potential buyers to provide an equitable path to ownership.

Models to consider including nonprofit conversion, government support, a public and/or digital media merger, and community ownership.

When we purchased Bay Windows and South End News in 2003, we'd like to tell you that we did it out of a high-minded commitment to the vital role that community newspapers play in our communities. But that would not be true.

We bought these papers because we thought it would be fun.

Was it? Absolutely.

Almost immediately after purchasing the papers, Bay Windows became the primary source of news and information related to the political, legal, and public opinion battles being waged to bring marriage equality to Massachusetts. This role was similar to the one the paper had played in its early years as a source of information about AIDS that could not be found anywhere else. Since its founding, the paper has been home to information about political, arts, entertainment, and cultural news relevant to the LGBTQ community.

South End News has played the same role in the life of the South End, a neighborhood that has shaped the city of Boston's nonprofit sector, biomedical research, culinary scene, and arts and cultural offerings. It has also been home to groups and individuals who have played influential roles in Puerto Rican, Black, and LGBTQ activism in the city of Boston.

Over the past two decades, we have met business owners, nonprofit leaders, artists, activists, chefs, politicians, city employees and community members. It has been the experience of a lifetime.

Now it is someone else's turn.

We can promise you three things: It will take a lot of work to make it work. You will exercise great influence in the South End and the state's LGBTQ community. And you will have fun.

Newmarket

Sullivan and residents said the neighborhood, where Roxbury, Dorchester and the South End meet just north of the South Bay Mall, is becoming near unlivable - City Council candidate Domingos Darosa said residents now try to drive elsewhere to shop, rather than go to South Bay and residents have to keep close watch on where their children play to make sure they don't get stuck with a discarded needle.

Brian Maloney, owner of Middlesex Truck & Coach, a truck-repair garage on Gerard Street, said he's having growing trouble attracting help because nobody wants to work in the area.

The business owners and residents called on the city to provide short-term answers to drive down the violence and longer-term solutions that would include getting even more housing and help for the addicts. They called on Gov. Baker to get involved as well, in part by using part of the Shattuck Hospital campus in Jamaica Plain for new facilities.

And they said it's time for the city of Quincy to stop trying to halt reconstruction of the bridge to Long Island, so the city can re-open that facility - one that would be available to people who need help from across the Boston area, including Quincy.

Street Comfort Station soon became a place where many of the most challenged people in the neighborhood spent some or all the day. Uniquely, in addition to offering services, the Comfort Station tolerated people actively using drugs around the site. It became, in effect, an experiment in offering a very low threshold space, a place that accommodates people who are not able to meet the rules and norms of most communal settings. A positive was that where overdoses occurred, help was at hand: Comfort Station staff reversed about 1.5 overdoses a day during Summer 2020.

Unfortunately, the presence of drug users attracted drug dealers to the Comfort Station and, with them, violence, including, recently, multiple stabbings and two homicides. As a result, some within the City and community are pressing for the permanent closure of the Comfort Station. Others, by contrast, argue that closing the Comfort Station will only further disperse drug use and accompanying public safety problems into the surrounding South End and Roxbury neighborhoods while lessening access to services. As of this writing, the City has yet to announce what action it will take.

Note: Residents may recall that last year there were actually two Comfort Stations: Atkinson Street, as discussed above, and another on Massachusetts Avenue just below Albany Street. The latter was discontinued for 2021 due to construction in the adjacent Woods-Mullen shelter for women

Where will you live until you can call this 'Home' again? Your association policy won't cover your additional living expenses. Condo owners NEED Personal Condominium Insurance for that. Aside from replacing your personal property, it will help you with rent, while you're still paying your mortgage. Contact us.
