Public Safety Update

BY SOUTH END NEWS STAFF

Three separate breaking and entering cases have been reported since August 12, with arrests made in connection to each incident, according to Boston Police reports.

Worcester Street Burglary Leads to Arrest

The most recent arrest occurred Monday afternoon when a male suspect, of West Roxbury, was apprehended by bicycle patrol officers near 794 Massachusetts Avenue at approximately 1:57 PM on August 18. The suspect was wanted on an active warrant stemming from a break-in that occurred nearly a week earlier.

According to police, the original incident took place at 87 Worcester Street on Tuesday, August 12, around 5:00 AM. The suspect gained entry to the victims' apartment through a roof deck door while the residents were sleeping inside. Various electronic items and prescription medications were stolen during the burglary.

The suspect faces charges of Breaking and Entering a Building, Nighttime for Felony, and Larceny

Festival Betances Celebrates 52 Years of Latino Culture in Boston

BY SOUTH END NEWS STAFF

Thousands gathered in the South End's Plaza Betances on July 19 for the 52nd annual Festival Betances, New England's longest-running Latino cultural festival hosted by Inquilinos Boricuas en Acción (IBA).

This year's celebration featured performances by salsa legend Bobby Valentín "El Rey Del Bajo," Afro-Caribbean group Jorge Arca and Raíz de Plena, and Orquesta El Macabeo, among others. Singer Lorna Marcano paid special tribute to Celia Cruz, the "Queen of Salsa."

Mayor Michelle Wu joined IBA CEO Vanessa Calderón-Rosado to welcome attendees to the day-long event, which showcased Latino

Revivals of two very different popular 1970's musicals are closing out the area theater season—one very exuberant, the other surprisingly mild mannered. "The Wiz"—on tour at the Citizens Opera House has all of the magic of the 1975 Tony Award winning original. By contrast, the North Shore Music Theatre revival of the long-running 1972 musical "Grease"—seems to tone down the show's hard-edged slickness.

The best musical versions of classic films wisely avoid reproducing their cinematic predecessors. Gifted director-choreographer Geoffrey Holders smartly conceived theatrical ways of bringing the wonder of the 1939 gem "The Wizard of Oz" to the stage. The pivotal early tornado became a whirling dervish-like dancer. At the same time Holder evoked the famous Yellow Brick Road with actors dressed in yellow escorting Dorothy, Scarecrow, Tinman and Lion on their way to the Emerald City. The vivid production on tour at the Opera House takes its cues from Holder's brilliant conception. As adapted by Amber Ruffin (one of the Tony-nominated book writers of the musical "Some Like It Hot"), the thoughtful revival of the black cast show finds Dorothy to be "the natural leader that she is" and the four companions "a ragtag group of friends, not a girl and her weird uncles."

Director Schele Williams sharply paces both the challenging odyssey of the quartet and their evolving fortunes in Oz. Dana Cimone is an instant standout as Dorothy. Her rich voice sometimes brings to mind Stephanie Mills—particularly on the beautiful solo "Soon As I Get Home." Cimone captures Dorothy's early vulnerability and her growing confidence as she overcomes obstacles and helps her companions respectively to obtain a brain, a heart and courage. Elijah Ahmad Lewis catches all of scarecrows' jazzy style and humor. D. Jerome has all of Tinman's evolving insecurity. Cal Mitchell goes to town vocally on Lion's notable solo "Mean Ole Lion." Alan Mingo, Jr. is a hoot as the elusive title enigma. High marks go to Jaquel Knight's exciting choreography, Sharen Davis's vivid costumes and Ryan J. O'Gara's often surreal lighting.

Near the end of the musical, good witch Glinda advises Dorothy to "Believe in Yourself." Likewise, audience members of all ages will believe in the spellbinding charms of "The Wiz."

Many fans of "Grease" may be more familiar with the popular John Travolta-Olivia Newton-John movie than the long-running 1972 musical. Theater buffs may appreciate North Shore Music Theatre producing artistic director Kevin P. Hill (last season's Broadway-worthy revival of "Titanic")'s earnest efforts to evoke the show's growing pain-rich 1950's Chicago-set fictional Rydell High. Granted, Rebecca Glick's period costumes reflect the peer pressure and group dynamics of the leather jacket T-Birds and the counterpart attire of the Pink Ladies. At the same time, Hill's own choreography proves striking and sharply synchronized for the Stroll sequence and the iconic "Born to Hand Jive" crowd-pleaser.

Even so, the total effect ought to be rougher. Hank Santos could do with more of the rebel posture of T-Bird leader Kenickie. Bailey Reese Greemon does capture Rizzo's pain and humanity in the touching solo "There Are Worse Things I Could Do," but her character needs more tenacity in the early going. Caroline Siegrist has the right yearning as Sandy—especially on "Hopelessly Devoted to You." Nick Cortazzo persuades as popular Danny Zuko and brings strong feeling to his Drive-in solo "Sandy." Jeremiah Garcia is a winner as outspoken Roger, though the production seems to soften his fondness for mooning. Still, Garcia and Jayson Brown as reserved buddy Doody are a very convincing duo on "Rock 'N' Roll Party Queen." Best of all is big-voiced Avionce Hoyles as Teen Angel on the flashy "Beauty School Dropout."

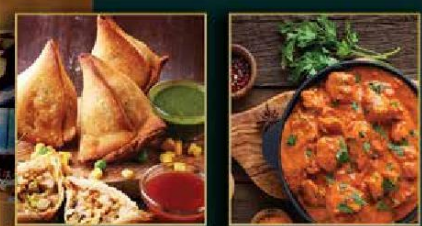

In the 1950's James Dean often proved the rebel of choice. The T-Birds in the NSMT "Grease" need more of his raw volatility. Still, most of the theatergoers at the performance I attended seemed to see the Beverly revival as the one that they wanted.

music, food, and traditions under the theme "Our Music, Our History, Our Community."

"Festival Betances is a treasured annual event that brings together residents and families to celebrate our vibrant Latino community," Wu said, praising IBA's five decades of work providing affordable housing and community programming.

The festival featured a colorful parade, food trucks serving traditional Caribbean and South American cuisine, and family activities including arts and crafts and face painting. Local officials attending included State Representative John Moran and several Boston City Councilors.

Founded in 1968, IBA serves more than 5,000 individuals annually through affordable housing, early education, youth programs, and arts initiatives. The festival represents the organization's flagship cultural event, complementing year-round programming that includes the Tito Puentes Latin Music Series and gallery exhibitions.

The celebration drew attendees from across Massachusetts and beyond, reinforcing its role as a cornerstone of Boston's cultural calendar and a vital expression of the city's Latino heritage.

from a Building. He is expected to be arraigned in Boston Municipal Court.

Pembroke Street Home Invasion

In a separate incident, a male suspect, 43, of Boston, was arrested on August 13 after allegedly making himself at home in a Pembroke Street residence for potentially weeks.

The homeowner discovered the intruder around 7:11 AM while eating breakfast with his two young children, ages 4 and 6.

Police investigation revealed that the suspect had obtained a key from an exterior lockbox intended for construction crews. When arrested, he was also found to have outstanding warrants for assault and battery on a household member and an abuse prevention order violation.

The suspect pleaded not guilty to charges of breaking and entering during the daytime with intent to commit a felony.

Cathedral Vandalism Sparks Hate Crime Investigation Call

The neighborhood also dealt with an act of vandalism at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross on Washington Street. Between the evening of August 13 and morning of August 14, an unknown suspect defaced a statue of the Virgin Mary with pink chalk, writing what police described as "illegible religious ramblings."

City Councilor Ed Flynn, who represents the South End, has called for the incident to be investigated as a hate crime, though Boston Police have not yet classified it as such. The statue has since been cleaned by Cathedral staff.

Community Response and Safety Measures

District D-4, which covers the South End, has increased bicycle patrols in response to the recent incidents.

Residents are advised to:

- Secure all entry points, including roof access
- Remove or secure exterior lockboxes when not actively needed
- Report suspicious activity immediately
- Consider additional security measures for ground-floor and accessible units

Anyone with information about these or related incidents is encouraged to contact District D-4 at (617) 343-4457 or the anonymous tip line.
