The additional valet support, sponsored by Blue Cross and in partnership with the City of Boston, will be available to riders at select Bluebikes stations weekdays from Monday, August 22, through Friday, September 16, during the hours of 7-11 am and 3-7 pm. Through its partnership with the municipal owners of Bluebikes, Blue Cross continues to support system growth and accessibility, including station expansions, upgrades, and additional bikes, and is pleased to be able to support the city of Boston during this scheduled MBTA maintenance.

Mayor's Garden Contest recognizes gardeners who have landscaped, planted flowers, trees, shrubs, and, in the process, helped beautify Boston's neighborhoods.

First place winners received the coveted "Golden Trowel" award from Mayor Wu in a ceremony held August 15 in the Boston Public Garden while second and third place winners were awarded certificates. Gardeners who have won three or more times in the last ten years were automatically entered into the Hall of Fame. These distinguished Hall-of-Famers are no longer eligible to enter as contestants but are invited to return as judges.

First place winners were also entered into a drawing for a JetBlue Grand Prize consisting of roundtrip flights for two to any nonstop destination from Boston and received a pair of tickets to the Harvard Museums of Science and Culture. In addition, Mahoney's Garden Centers provided gardener's gift bags to the top three winners in each category, as well as gift certificates for the 2022 Hall of Fame winners.

South Enders took first and second place in the Porch, Balcony, or Container Garden. Alex & Stephanie Tsalagas earned first place, and Beverly Christians and Chris Hartmann finished in second.

Pine Street Inn Appoints Lorn Davis as Chair of its Board of Directors

SUBMITTED BY PINE STREET INN

Pine Street Inn, New England's largest homeless services organization, is proud to announce its incoming chair of the board of directors, Lorn Davis, who has served on the board for over 13 years. Since joining the board in 2009, Davis has held several key roles, most recently as treasurer and vice-chair. In addition, he also serves on Pine Street Inn's audit and finance committee.

"I am honored to take on the role of board chair at Pine Street Inn," Davis said. "For over 50 years, Pine Street has led Boston and the nation in the fight to end homelessness, evolving from providing 'three hots and a cot' to delivering a comprehensive range of services, including housing, emergency shelter, street outreach and workforce development to more than 1,400 individuals each day. I look forward to continuing to move forward on its crucial work of expanding housing and ending homelessness in Boston," he added.

"We are thrilled to welcome Lorn Davis as our new chair of Pine Street's board of directors," said Lyndia Downie, president and executive director of Pine Street Inn.

"Lorn has demonstrated a deep commitment to the organization, contributing knowledge and expertise that has helped us make great strides as we continue to move individuals off the street, out of shelter and into housing."

Davis has spent over 25 years in the financial services industry. He is a co-founder and managing partner of College Hill Capital Partners and currently serves as an Independent Trustee of Nationwide Mutual Funds and Nationwide Variable Insurance Trust. Davis previously served as a managing director at Hancock Capital Management and John Hancock Life Insurance. He holds a BA from the College of the Holy Cross, and an MBA from New York University.

Pine Street Inn looks forward to the contributions that Davis will continue to bring as chair of the board. His new role comes at a key time for Pine Street, as the organization focuses on scaling up permanent supportive housing for those experiencing homelessness in Boston. With 251 new units currently in development in Boston, the organization is poised to make an even greater impact on ending homelessness in Boston.

Anastasia

that Anastasia perished along with her entire family (except the Dowager Empress). Fact and forensics notwithstanding, her possible escape has become the inspiration for a kind of iconic tale of hope and redemption.

That tale has taken the form of a play, films and a Broadway musical (2017) collaborated on by the late great playwright Terrence McNally, composer Stephen Flaherty and lyricist Lynn Ahrens (all Tony Award winners for "Ragtime"). While the overlong show (two and one half hours) proves more entertaining once the title heroine and her compatriots reach Paris, a strong tour and a rich-voiced cast should more than satisfy fans of the 1997 animated version.

If the uneven McNally book also focuses on the efforts of con man friends Dmitry and Vlad to persuade the Dowager Empress that amnesiac Anya is actually her granddaughter, it does make some interesting changes along the way. Where the villain of the animated film is cursing raised from the dead Rasputin, the treacherous royal advisor is gone here— intriguingly replaced by Bolshevik officer Gleb. The son of one of the guards tasked with assassinating the Romanovs, Gleb walks a tightrope of ambivalence regarding Anya. Although prepared to kill Anya should she prove to be a Romanov, he finds himself falling in love with her.

Of course that ambivalence will be fully tested after Anya, Dmitry and Vlad escape the officers pursuing them, arrive in Paris and come before the Dowager Empress. With the second act taking place in the City of Lights, the musical appealingly gives more attention to 1927 Paris after a weaker St. Petersburg-set first (1906, 1907, 1927). Choreographer Bill Burns provides Nicholas II—revealed by the Soviets—with an initial moment of sympathy as the tsar dances briefly with Little Anastasia and he does include Russian folk dance elements.

Even so, the show truly high steps in the second act opening "Paris Holds the Key (To Your Heart)" and the anthem-like expatriate number "Land of Yesterday." A combination of comedy and romance enriches "The Countess and the Common Man." The musical also includes substantial well-danced sequences from "Swan Lake" during the "Quartet at the Ballet" number. Throughout the musical, Aaron Rhyne's exceptional projection design makes St. Petersburg and Paris scenes vivid—especially the dramatic first act train ride and the evocation of the Eiffel Tower. Someday there ought to be a Tony Award for projection design, and Rhyne should receive a retroactive one.

Also very evocative—under Sarah Hartmann's effective direction—is luminous Kyla

Stone as Anastasia. Stone is touchingly vulnerable and idealistic as the identity-seeking heroine. Her strong rendition of the character's signature-like "In My Dreams" is very moving. Sam McLellan has all of Dmitri's determination—notably on "Everything to Win"—and his caring for Anya. Bryan Seastrom is winningly flamboyant as Vlad—particularly with comically sharp Madeline Raube as the Dowager's lady-in-waiting Countess Lily. Stepping in for Ben Edquist as Gleb, Brandon Delgado displays a deeply resonant voice that adds weight to a character not unlike Javert in "Les Misérables."

Is "Anastasia" a kind of poor man's "My Fair Lady" with the heroine meant to come across as a duchess? Does this very busy musical have a theatrical identity crisis? Shortcomings notwithstanding, the stellar cast and Rhyne's amazing projection make the tour of "Anastasia" as worthy as its heroine.
