

South End Branch of BPL floods again

This message was posted on Facebook:

"Message from Yvette Jarreau, president of the Friends of the SE Library:

Rutland Square neighbor Alice Stone together with Marleen Nienhuis sounded the alarm when water was seen cascading from the SE branch building into the adjacent alleyway:

Yvette writes: Just got back into town and went over to SEL. So depressing...another flood, and this one worse than the last. Water up into the first floor about 2", although now it is almost all pumped out, which has taken all day. Seems a water pipe coming into the building broke, probably Fri or Sat due to the extreme cold (my guess) and no heating, and water poured in. They got the pumping trucks there and pumped out a tremendous amount of water.

Hamilton Gets The Job Done

BY JULES BECKER
Contributing Writer

Alexander Hamilton was as great in his own way as any of the Founding Fathers. The primary author of the Federalist Papers also played a crucial part in the establishment of America's strong financial status—particularly as the first secretary of the treasury. In 2015, Lin-Manuel Miranda captured his amazing achievements in a landmark Tony Award-winning musical fittingly entitled "Hamilton." At a time when many polarizing so-called leaders threaten democracy and politicize the national debt, a second strong Hub visit of this show—more timely than ever—is providing a powerful reminder of its subject's impact.

Miranda sees Hamilton as a diamond in the rough, and the description is more than apt. In giving the curious title "Ten Duel Commandments" to a first act number, he may have known that Nevis-born Hamilton actually studied the Ten Commandments in Hebrew at a Jewish school on that Caribbean island (recent research suggesting he may have actually been Jewish). The musical's smart book does portray its complex hero as a man who defied easy labeling among both admirers and detractors.

Even his reserved nemesis

Aaron Burr—probably better known for killing him in a duel in 1804 than for serving as vice president under Thomas Jefferson—recognizes Hamilton's writing and speaking

Pontiff's hurtful statement "homosexuality is a not crime", is a sin

BY REV. IRENE MONROE
Contributing Writer

Last Month Pope Francis told the Associated Press during an exclusive interview, "Being homosexual isn't a crime," sending global shockwaves again. "It's not a crime," the pontiff stated. "Yes, but it's a sin. Fine, but first let's distinguish between a sin and a crime."

The pontiff's statement helps and hurts the LGBTQ+ community.

The LGBTQ+ community worldwide is constantly under attack. Pope Francis is a global influencer. He alone can create a movement to decriminalize homosexuality.

Nearly 70 countries have criminalized their LGBTQ+ populations with the death penalty in 11 of them. Last year, in the U.S., over 300 anti-LGBTQ+ legislation bills in 28 states were presented. Florida's "Don't Say Bill" was signed into law.

Many LGBTQ+ organizations and Catholics have applauded the pontiff's statement. Some see Francis's pronouncement as a softer and more humane attempt to mitigate harassment, stigma, violence, and in some cases, death our community has experienced. "His historic statement should send a message to world leaders and millions of Catholics around the world: LGBTQ people deserve to live in a world without violence and condemnation, and more kindness and understanding," Sarah Kate Ellis, president and CEO of the U.S.-based advocacy group GLAAD told the press.

Francis correctly states that his "bishops, in particular, need to undergo a process of change to recognize the dignity of everyone." In 2008, the Vatican declined to sign a U.N. declaration to decriminalize homosexuality. However, we have seen throughout Francis's papacy that his pronouncements don't alter Church teachings, making him look like a church bureaucrat, a flip-flopper, or, at worse, a titular head.

For example, in 2020, The Vatican walked back Francis's vocal support for same-sex unions. In October 2020, while interviewing about his life for the documentary "Francesco," Francis fully endorsed same-sex civil unions. Again, setting off global shock waves.

"Homosexual people have the right to be in a family. They are children of God," the pontiff said in the film by Oscar-nominated director Evgeny Afineevsky. "You can't kick someone out of a family, nor make their life miserable for this. What we have to have is a civil union law; that way, they are legally covered."

Francis's statement was a Hallelujah moment for many LGBTQ+ Catholics. It optimistically suggested a change—having dogma-transforming ramifications—for the church in this 21st century despite conservatives and traditionalist priests still hell-bent on continuing on an anti-modernity track of his now-deceased predecessor, Pope Benedict XVI.

The Vatican stepped in, making public its terse statement, "Nothing to see here, Secretariat of State argues, saying no change in view of homosexuality."

Another example was in 2021, the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the Vatican's orthodox office, issued a formal statement instructing its priests not to offer blessings to same-sex couples. The church's reason: God cannot bless sin. To the shock of LGBTQ+ Catholics and allies globally, Pope Francis approved the decree. His approval of the decree was a betrayal despite the many liberal-leaning LGBTQ+ optimistic pronouncements heard during his papacy.

For instance, I recall Pope Francis's remarks while flying home after a weeklong visit to Brazil in 2013, responding to a question about a possible "gay lobby" in the Vatican. His answer set off global shock waves. "When I meet a gay person, I have to distinguish between their being gay and being part of a lobby," he said. "If they accept the Lord and have goodwill, who am I to judge them?" The pontiff's public statement was then the most LGBTQ+ affirming remark the world had ever heard from the Catholic Church until his recent comment that "homosexuality is not a crime."

But Francis hurts the global LGBTQ+ community by calling homosexuality a sin.

"When I said it is a sin, I was simply referring to Catholic moral teaching, which says that every sexual act outside of marriage is a sin," Francis stated in a written response to Outreach editor James Martin, S.J.

The pontiff has been in office just a month shy of a decade. His seemingly affirming statements during his tenure have not changed church teachings on homosexuality or same-sex unions.

I do hope some countries heed Francis's advice and stop criminalizing homosexuality. However, Francis stating that "Homosexuality is a sin" leaves in place his characterization and the church's belief of us as being "intrinsically disordered" and contrary to natural law.

Being LGBTQ+ is not a crime. Being LGBTQ+ is not a sin. However, the church's stance about us is a sin upon itself, and a crime against humanity.

Hamilton

talents in the vivid first-act closing number "Non-Stop." Envious of Hamilton's position as a kind of right hand man for Washington, Burr also marvels at his ability to enlist the likes of John Jay and James Madison to collaborate on the Federalist Papers. The Hamilton-Burr conflict may call to mind the Mozart-Salieri face-off in Peter Shaffer's imaginative drama "Amadeus," though Mozart actually died from tuberculosis, not at the hand of the court composer.

The other major contrast in Miranda's play emerges with the second act return of Jefferson from his ambassadorial post in France—wonderfully evoked in the jazzy opener "What'd I Miss." When Jefferson complains about the sizable financial needs of Hamilton's New York, the latter tellingly points to the slavery profits of Jefferson's Virginia. Hamilton also speaks of a black regiment. Even so, he will eventually side with Jefferson rather than Burr at a pivotal political moment.

If Hamilton's life—political and personal—is admittedly messy, the same proves true for independence.

Still, Hamilton proclaims, "Immigrants—we get the job done." To emphasize the ideal of American diversity, the New York and touring companies have purposely included many African-American and Hispanic actors. Pierre Jean Gonzalez may not be quite as riveting as Miranda himself in the Broadway original, but he does capture Hamilton's energy and self-assuredness—especially on the fiery "My Shot." Gonzalez also does full justice to Hamilton's vulnerability with regard to personal failings. Jared Dixon has all of Burr's caginess and attitude. He sings with robust intensity—most notably as Burr presses to be in "The Room Where It Happens."

In this richly sung and strongly danced tour—under the sharp direction of Thomas Kail and sporting Andy Blankenbuehler's inspired choreographic combination of modern dance and ballet, some of the best performances come in support. Marcus Choi catches Washington's remarkable humanity as he fights British forces and later becomes a leader among equals. Nikisha Williams brings great heart and caring to Hamilton's intrepid wife Eliza—especially as she demonstrates uncommon understanding for her very busy husband in "That Would Be Enough." Ta'Rea Campbell has her sister Angelica (Schuyler)'s wit and insight about her brother-in-law and herself.

Jared Howelton—as eye-catching in his own way as Daveed Diggs on Broadway—captures both Lafayette's bravery and Jefferson's grandiose demeanor and body language. Neil Haskell is a big-voiced hoot as buffoonish King George deluding himself about the return of the revolutionaries on "You'll Be Back." Conductor Emmanuel Schwartzman brings out the exuberance and wide-ranging musicality—rap, hip-hop, rhythm and blues, jazz, pop and folk—of Miranda's memorably eclectic score.

Hamilton speaks of "smashin' every expectation." Miranda's wide-sweeping musical more than lives up to that description as brilliant stagecraft and an exciting history lesson.
